PHOENIX (AP) -- The U.S. Border Patrol says the wife of a missing Arizona rancher has been arrested in connection with the disappearance of her husband. Border Patrol spokesman Ralph DeSergio says the wife of the missing rancher, Ammon and Ryan Bundy, was arrested Monday and booked on suspicion of helping her husband flee. DeSergio says the arrest was part of a "routine" search in the Yuma, Arizona area. Ammon Bundy and several supporters occupied a federal wildlife refuge near Burns, Oregon, for several weeks earlier this year. The Bundys have been charged in connection with an armed takeover of the Malheur National Wildlife Refuge earlier this year. Prosecutors say the Bundys and several co-defendants are trying to spark a wider rebellion against federal laws.

Neuronal adhesion molecules: biology and function. Neurons must attach to each other to form networks, and to cells in the surrounding environment to support and guide them during their migration and positioning. This function requires that the attachment be stable and that neurons grow and move while maintaining their intercellular junctions intact. The identification of cell-specific adhesion molecules that mediate binding of individual neurons to each other and to their environment, and the molecular characterization of their cellular and extracellular binding partners, has furthered our understanding of how neurons coordinate their growth with adhesive interactions. In this review, we summarize the recent findings on the molecular basis of neuronal interactions within the developing and adult nervous system and correlate them with the known effects of misregulation of adhesive molecules on neuronal development and function.

Q: Replace words containing "-" (hyphen) in filenames in Linux I have a folder of images that contain filenames with a hyphen (e.g., 123456.jpg) and I would like to replace them with a space (" "). I have tried the following command: `for f in /.jpg; do mv $f "${f/- -}"; done` but this is very slow, taking several minutes to do about 20,000 files. Any way to speed it up?

A: A simple globbing search and replace? `$ printf '%s ' 123456.jpg " " "${f/- -}" | xargs -l f mv "${f/- -}" "${f// - /}"`

You can save a file to the desktop, to a folder on your computer, or to a USB drive. After you have saved the file to a location that you choose, you can use a variety of methods to share it, such as e-mailing it to a friend, uploading it to a website, or storing it on an online file sharing service. You can also store files on an external hard drive or on a flash drive. This makes it easy to take your files with you, either to work or on vacation. Here are some different ways to share a

You can then use your e-mail program to send the file to anyone who would like to receive it. To create a hyperlink for the file, right-click the file and select Copy Link. This creates a hyperlink to the file. You can then send the link to someone who is not connected to the internet or to someone who does not have the file in their computer. Open a file in a web browser You can also send an attachment by uploading the file to a website, such as a file-sharing website. You can either do this by choosing File > Save As, or by simply clicking the Save button on the bottom of your screen. To share a file on a website, you will need to first upload it to the site, and then choose File > Choose. Use an e-mail program The easiest way to share files by e-mail is to simply send the file as an attachment. Open your e-mail program, select File > Attach, and then choose the file you wish to send. In some instances, you might want to send the file without an attachment, in which case you can choose File > Send > Attach None. Open a file in another
