Hello all thanks for your comments. Lived the story 3 times now and it is still really good IMO. The narrative is very easy to follow and I found it very well written. Adam is a very complex character and I think your readers will find him fascinating. You did a great job. I have two minor suggestions. When Adam goes back to work at his natural workplace of Cordoba he is busy with writing at his desk and ends up asleep at his desk. This scene would probably be better if he is actually writing. This might also set up the next phase in the plot. The second thing is that Eve decides to take action after having been given the inner motivation by Adam to change and leave the Garden when they hear Satan and his demons talking. I would suggest that Eve be given some inner motivation from within herself to leave the Garden and when she does, she does not see Adam at all. The first-person narrative is set in the year 1918, just before the First World War. In the novel, the main protagonist, Private Adam Raven, is a young, idealistic soldier sent to a part of Europe that is occupied by German forces. The story's focus centers on the conflict between Adam and his fellow soldiers, Captain Bille, Major Green, and Jewish Sergeant Ludvik, all of whom are attempting to maintain some semblance of order during the German occupation. Adam, who has recently been transferred to Ludvik's platoon, finds his world turned upside down when he is introduced to a Jewish girl named Rachel. As he adapts to the outbreak of war in Europe, he quickly develops an intense attraction to Rachel. What starts as a purely platonic relationship develops into something more complicated, as Adam learns that while Rachel is Jewish, she is also his "sister." Adam Raven, the protagonist of A Pilot's Wife, is in a situation that he has never experienced before. As a new pilot at a small airfield in England, he is suddenly faced with the reality that his marriage is in trouble, or at least, that his wife Janice has begun to doubt their validity due to his two prior marriages. Janice and Adam share their experiences in the book. Janice feels like her marriage is falling apart. She says, "The place of love is on the ground, where feet trample on it." Soon, Janice is upset by the fact that they have no sex life. Janice also is upset because she does not like
